Sir Sam's not just for skiers

MATT JAMES

Staff Reporter

Sir Sam's Ski Area isn't just for skiers and snowboarders any more. It plans to become a year-round destination for outdoor adventurers.

"We have been busy getting ready for the upcoming season," Chris Bishop, one of the Eagle Lake business's owners, told the Echo on September 12. But instead of that season ending at the end of winter, Bishop says the time has come for growth.

"The infrastructure is all here for taking people up for scenic rides or to take mountain bikes up and the chalet is here to do the food service and arts and crafts," said Bishop. "It just made sense. We've got the clientele here in the winter time that would like to come back in the summer time and take advantage of whatever activities we're doing."

Honouring Terry

Thanks to the remnants of Hurricane Ike, it was a surprisingly warm and humid morning that greeted participants in Haliburton's Terry Fox Run. Chris Carl, Andy Salvatori, Marcel Crete, Mike Armstrong (towing his two children) and Jane Heyes enjoyed the exercise and the camaraderie. More photos and details are on page 26.

Boonieville comes to an end

Gus, Clem, Woody and a forest full of animals say goodbye

JENN WATT

Staff Reporter

This week's Boonieville is nothing monumental, nothing sentimental and especially nothing cheesy, but Haliburton cartoonist Charlie Teljeur did take a bit longer constructing it than normal.

That's because it's the last week for the 16-year-old cartoon that has run at the bottom of page seven in the Haliburton Echo since 1992.

"You can take it as literal or deep ... It means whatever you want it to mean," Teljeur said of the final strip.

Retiring the small cast of characters - Gus, Clem and Woody along with various animal friends - was a decision Teljeur came to as many circumstances converged, including a new interest in writing and a realization that he may not stay in Haliburton much longer.

"I'm anticipating moving out of a rural area" to take on more writing, he said, and thinks moving closer to the Greater Toronto Area will probably become a necessity.

And since Boonieville is all about rural living, Teljeur thinks it would be inauthentic to be drawing cartoons about the boonies while living amongst skyscrapers.

Over the years, Boonieville has provided another way of looking at the slower pace of small-town life for readers in nearly every province. Often poking fun at human activity through animal

Candidates' press releases start flying

Now that a federal election is underway, local candidates are busy sending press releases to the Echo. We'll provide snippets of them every week so our readers know what's on the minds of our candidates.

New Democrat Steve Yardy

Saturday – "Stephen Yardy today blasted the 'unacceptable and outrageous' practices of many banks, oil companies, telecom and credit-card firms for contributing to the income squeeze on working and middle class families. Yardy would help consumers by:

- Stopping price gouging at the gas pumps by instituting tough monitoring and the regulation of fuel prices.
- Banning ATM fees.
- Ending hidden fees with laws requiring full disclosure of charges by banks, cellphone operators, and other companies, including the unfair practice of charging more for cellphone text messages.
- Putting a cap on interest rates and fees charged by 'fringe banks'.
- Capping the interest rates on credit cards."

Conservative Barry Devolin

The incumbent candidate officially opened his campaign headquarters on Saturday. They're at 30 Kent Street West in downtown Lindsay (between the York Tavern and Coldwell Banker Realty).

Liberal Marlene White

She says, "Normally, going into an election the government attempts to promote its policies and plans while the opposition evaluates these projects. But in this election the opposite is true because the government doesn't have any policies and plans for Canada so all they can do is criticize our plans, the plans of the opposition. Only the Liberal Party has plans for Canada." She says "The carbon tax would be only on polluters and that the revenue from the tax would be given to Canadian families and to green corporations, a plan completely misrepresented by Stephen Harper."

The riding's Liberal Association held elections with results as follows: Brad Colpitts, Haliburton, vice president; Colin Williamson, Buckhorn, treasurer; O. Von Bogen, Buckhorn, membership chair; Bruce Stewart, Peterborough, recording secretary; Jeremy Carver, Woodview, vice president policy; and directors Jack Kyle, Lindsay; Lynda Palmer, Rosedale; Jack Kloefer, Bethany; Audrey Von Bogen, Buckhorn; Andrew Flynn, Lindsay, past president; Greg Walling, Lindsay, and former candidate.

Christian Heritage David Switzer

The candidate from Haliburton County says that if the leader of the Green Party, can take part in the leaders' debate, then his leader, Ron Gray, should also be able to join in. "The Christian Heritage Party of Canada has been on the campaign trail since 1986. After the Green Party [we're] the next largest political party in Canada."

MATT JAMES/Echo

NDP candidate Stephen Yardy was campaigning on Haliburton's main street on Friday. He stopped to talk with Debbie Brassard of Kennis Lake.

Candidates' debate Sept. 25

Jack Brezina will be the moderator at the all-candidates' debate sponsored by the Haliburton Echo, Minden Times and Canoe FM.

It will be voters' first opportunity to ask the candidates about the issues most important to them. The NDP, Liberal and Conservative candidates have all confirmed their attendance.

The meeting starts at 7 p.m. at the Haliburton Legion. It will be taped by Canoe FM and broadcast on Sunday, September 27, at a time to be announced.

GREG HOEKSTRA/Echo

"I'm very impressed by this community and how welcoming they've been," says France Meunier, who was also attracted to SBES because of its French immersion program.

New principal loves her first impressions

GREG HOEKSTRA

Staff Reporter

Ever since her first day on the job, France Meunier, the new principal of Stuart Baker Elementary School, has felt almost like a celebrity walking the red carpet at the Toronto International Film Festival.

Everywhere she goes people are stopping to shake her hand – on the street, at the bank, or in the supermarket – and to give her a warm welcome to the community they call home.

It's only three weeks into the new school year and already Meunier – affectionately known as "Madame France" – admits she's hooked on Haliburton.

"I'm very impressed by this community and how welcoming they've been," she says from behind the desk of her new office. "People here are just so kind...It's an amazing feeling."

Originally from the small skiing town of Ste-Agathe, Quebec, Meunier moved to Ontario 25 years ago to study English and French at York University's Glendon College.

After four years at York, Meunier decided to apply to teacher's college at the University of Toronto, and one year later she landed her first job as a French Immersion teacher in Scarborough.

A few years later Meunier was transferred from Scarborough to the Trillium Lakelands District School Board, where she first worked as a teacher in Lindsay, then as a vice-principal in Omemee, and, most recently, a principal for 10 years in Coboconk.

Earlier this year, after she learned that her colleague and acquaintance Micheline Roy was planning to retire as principal of SBES, Meunier decided to throw her name in the hat for the position, in large part because of the school's reputation for having a strong French immersion program.

"I wanted to tap into my French. I had this skill and wanted to be able to offer it to the kids," she says.

Coming to Haliburton was her choice, she stresses, and so far she couldn't be happier.

"My husband and I have a motorcycle that we take for rides, so I had seen your little town and thought it was beautiful," she said. "I thought it was such a nice community...I mean, how many towns do you see built on the lake?"

Of course, it's not just the natural beauty of the area, but also the staff and students at SBES that have made the transition such a smooth one.

"The staff here is very caring. They know so much about what's happening, and you're nothing without your team," she says. "Plus the lady who was in my seat before me did an amazing job. It's difficult to follow in such great footsteps, but easy to take a school that is so well organized."

Another plus for Meunier was that she and her husband, Harry, can keep the house in Coboconk that they've made home over the past 10 years.

"It's good for me...It's about a 50-minute drive, so on my way up I plan my day, and on my way back I close my folders and plan what I should do tomorrow," she laughs.

After 20 years in education, Meunier says she's likely ready to spend the remainder of her career right here at SBES.

Looking back on it now, Meunier says there was no epiphany or defining moment when she realized teaching would be her life's work. However, she muses that perhaps the need to teach and work with children was in her blood, passed down from her father, who spent his career as a school administrator.

"It's almost like I always knew this is where I'd end up," she says. "I really just love kids. Every day they have a fresh new story. They have a joie de vivre that you only see in kids."

"It's amazing, you can go into the classroom and almost see the light bulbs going on overtop of their heads," adds Meunier. "It's the most amazing feeling when you're a teacher and you see the light bulb go on. You really get the feeling that you're doing something important."

"I want to thank everyone for how they have opened their arms to me and been so nice to me," she concludes. "I'm going to do everything in my power to build on what has been done here."

Dialing 911 is not a joke

Dysart man charged for mis-using emergency number

MATT JAMES

Staff Reporter

On the afternoon of September 9 officers from the Haliburton Highlands OPP detachment responded to a 911 call on County Road 21 in Haliburton. Upon arriving at the scene they soon learned there was no emergency.

And while not all non-emergencies are grounds for arrest on this day a 57-year-old Dysart et al man was charged with public mischief and resisting arrest.

"It wasn't an emergency and we went whipping over there and it was nothing," said Constable Mark McMaster. "You get to a point where you have to say enough is enough with some of these [calls]. People have to realize every time we get one of those calls we have to send two officers." Sometimes that means sending two cruisers.

McMaster believes a large number of the calls are from

JENN WATT/Echo

When the OPP receives a 911 call, two officers respond. If it's a false alarm - either accidentally or by intent - that means that officers aren't available in case of a real emergency.

people who have 911 programmed into their phone and press the button accidentally. The police do not recommend programming 911 into your phone.

McMaster says the public needs to realize that if there are only three police cruisers on the road and two 911 calls come in and two cruisers are sent to the non-emergency call that might leave the real emergency short-handed.

Other types of inappropriate calls include troubles with phone lines, prank calls, children playing with the phone, or calls for help with non-emergencies such as theft.

For non-emergency calls the public should be calling the OPP service line at 1-888-310-1122, not 911 or the detachment in Minden. However, calls to detachment will be transferred.

While McMaster did not have statistics of the percentage of non-emergency from last year he did say that the Smith Falls 911 dispatch received 421 calls from Haliburton County in 2007, an average of more than 35 calls a month.

"I wouldn't hesitate to say that the vast majority weren't actual emergencies," he said of the calls made in 2007.

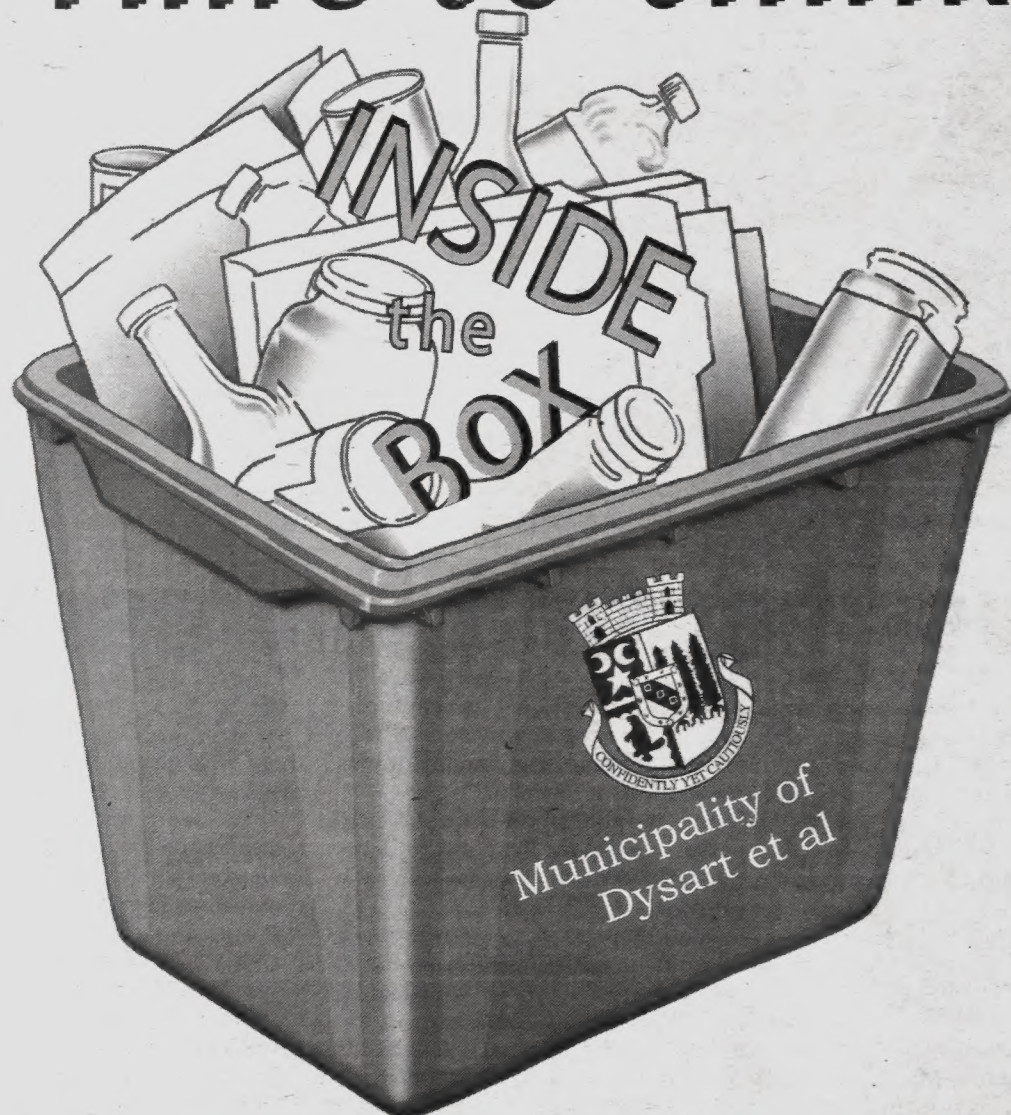

As of September 11 McMaster said the Smith Falls dispatch, where all 911 calls made from phones in Haliburton County go, received 296 calls in 2008, an average of fewer than 33 calls per month.

McMaster gave examples of what would qualify as a 911 emergency: reporting an impaired driver, a personal or multi-person injury accident, or a domestic incident - essentially any time a person has been injured or when another human life is endangered.

And while responses to non-emergency calls don't directly come with a cost to the public, they could indirectly result in something serious.

"It certainly takes them [police] away from something else they could be doing," McMaster said.

Highlands East councillors want to hang up on answering service

GREG HOEKSTRA

Staff Reporter

The municipality of Highlands East is revamping its telephone answering service after complaints that the system is unhelpful and difficult to use.

During last Tuesday's meeting several councillors complained that the office's phone system is creating headaches for not only their ratepayers, but also for themselves.

"Highlands East has the most difficult, hard-to-use answer machine system," said Deputy-reeve Jim Mackie. "The system is useless. It's broken and it needs to be fixed."

Mackie said one of the problems with the automated system is that if an employee doesn't pick up the phone, the caller isn't given the option to go back and try another extension. Instead, they have to hang up the phone, re-dial the municipality's number, and start over.

"It's a dead-end loop," Mackie said, adding that one day he called the office 18 times in a row trying to speak to a real person.

Councillor Gary Stoughton agreed that the system is failing, and said he feels the municipality is in the wrong for not having a receptionist to answer taxpayers' calls.

Councillor Suzanne Partridge said her concern with the system is that residents with hearing impairments, such as her mother, often have trouble understanding the recorded message. As a result, they are never able to navigate through the system.

CAO Sharon Stoughton-Craig acknowledged the current system is flawed, and said the phone company was to work on it Monday.

"That's good...I'll phone you on Tuesday then," joked Stoughton.

Old Donald building is a costly possession for Dysart

GREG HOEKSTRA

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the September 8 meeting of Dysart et al council.

The concrete remains of part of the old Donald Wood Products factory are proving to be "an expensive problem" for Dysart et al, Reeve Murray Fearrey said.

Dysart roads superintendent Brian Nicholson presented two quotations for the demolition and removal of the old building, which sits abandoned and dilapidated on municipal property on the north side of Koshlong Lake Road near the Rail Trail. (It's not the factory ruins.)

The first quotation said the work could be done for just under $47,000, while the second said it would cost closer to $78,000.

Council's hope was that a portion of the land might eventually be purchased if the building was removed, but since the property's estimated value is only $25,000 to $30,000, doing so doesn't make financial sense.

Instead, council has asked staff to look into whether there are any grants or brownfield programs that would help the township cover demolition costs.

In the meantime, council has also asked that Nicholson secure the property with fencing so it can be put back on the market for sale as-is.

No parking

In his report to council bylaw enforcement officer Matt Aldom said August was a relatively quiet month, but noted that one persistent problem in Haliburton's downtown core is vehicles parking in the "taxi only" parking space in front of the CIBC on Highland Street.

Drivers are reminded that they are not permitted to park in that area and doing so will result in a ticket.

Aldom also said the bylaw department received several complaints about illegal dumping at landfill gates and other locations throughout the municipality.

Last week council agreed to step up surveillance and fine any person who is caught dumping illegally.

Pine Lake bridge

Dysart is hoping to put an application together for funding under the communities component of the Building Canada Fund.

Under the program the federal and provincial governments will pay for two-thirds of a project's costs, while the municipality provides the remaining third.

The program includes 17 categories of infrastructure that are eligible for funding, including areas such as drinking water, solid waste management, public transit, roads, local and regional airports, culture, sport, and green energy.

However, at Monday's meeting council identified one project in particular where assistance would be most welcome, that being repair work on the Pine Lake bridge in West Guilford.

Smoke detector blitz

Dysart et al fire chief Miles Maughan said the fire department is planning a voluntary smoke detector blitz to coincide with Fire Prevention Week, beginning Monday, October 6.

Maughan said volunteers from the fire department will go door to door throughout the community testing smoke detectors to ensure that they are functioning and don't need to be replaced.

Maughan told council it has been 10 years since the department last conducted a blitz.

All smoke detectors should be replaced after 10 years, he added, even if they still appear to be working properly.

Haliburton book in the works

Local author Michael Barnes is at it again.

Shortly after the launch of his most recent book, Red Lake: Golden Treasure Chest, Barnes is already planning his next project: a travel book focusing on Haliburton County.

Last week Barnes wrote to both Dysart et al and Highlands East councils requesting permission to use the township's crests in his book. Barnes said the book will "be a highly positive book on the county and is meant to promote our area across Canada."

To date, Barnes has authored more than 50 books including two on Haliburton County.

Lakeland conference comes to Haliburton

For the first time in its seven-year history the Lakeland Conference will be held in the village of Haliburton on September 27 at Fleming College.

The conference is an opportunity for shoreline property owners to come together to learn about the common environmental issues facing their lakes with local experts and exhibitors specializing in relevant services and information.

In past years the conference has explored the effects of climate change on lakes, permitting work around water and municipal shoreline development planning. This year the conference will be taking a closer look at shoreline naturalization techniques, septic systems, the Trent Severn Waterway evaluation report, tools for lake associations to assist with the lake planning process and other timely topics.

Registration fees, which include lunch, are $20 per individual or $35 per couple. Organizers are also putting out a call for exhibitors to community organizations and businesses who are interested in connecting with cottagers.

Saying goodbye

GETTING OLDER OFTEN SEEMS to be the process of adapting to loss. We lose our childhood, then maybe our grandparents. We say goodbye to the recklessness of youth and settle into newfound maturity. Then we feel a loss of some of our energy, the bounce in our step, the compelling need for activity. Our parents die, and maybe even some of our contemporaries. Other losses are perhaps not as big, but they can be meaningful – the loss of children in the home, of old neighbourhoods and familiar ways of life.

Because we often can do nothing about these losses, our growth comes from how we cope with them. Some losses fit into the natural course of things and are easier to absorb; others are painful and raw for a long time.

martha perkins

Long-time readers of the Echo have said hello and goodbye to many people.

They've read about some of the individuals who make this county strong only to learn later that they've died or are moving away. They've also had to say goodbye to many of those people who brought them the stories.

This is a week for saying goodbye and while it causes much sadness, there is also acceptance.

Twenty-three years ago last week, Celia Brown was the first person I interviewed when I moved to Haliburton; I wrote about her again on my 20th anniversary with the Echo, noting how my perceptions of age had changed in those two decades. Today is Mrs. Brown's funeral in Minden. She's had a long struggle with cancer but, at the age of 99, was at peace with the thought of dying.

Today is also the last time readers will get a giggle from Charlie Teljeur's Boonievillie cartoon. He's decided to move on, both in his career and perhaps in where he lives. Charlie's humour is so sly and sometimes deceptively simple. For 16 years he made us laugh at ourselves and neighbours while still celebrating the very things we were laughing at.

Today isn't the last day you will read Greg Hoekstra's byline in the Echo but that's only because we have a backlog of stories we haven't yet been able to fit in. But as of today he and his girlfriend Amanda Schwartz are driving towards British Columbia, curious to see if the West holds any attraction for them as they begin the next phase of their careers. In two years Greg left an indelible imprint on our pages. He was a strong writer and became a very good photographer, often surprising himself with what he came up with when he went into the community with his tape recorder and camera.

We will all miss Charlie's and Greg's contributions but it's because we're grateful for what they've shared with us that we're happy for their willingness to take a risk to see what the future holds. They will both do well and it would be a shame to hold them back simply because they make all of our lives better.

King of the hill

And now for the good news

DOCTORS WITHOUT BORDERS or, more precisely, their French equivalent, Medicins Sans Frontieres, have come up with what is being hailed as arguably the most important healing substance since penicillin. It goes by the very unlikely name of Plumpy Nut.

Formulated in 1999 by French nutritionist Andre Briend, Plumpy Nut is a concoction of peanut paste, powdered milk, sugar plus essential vitamins and minerals — a very tasty and wholesome food that is so nutritious it is able to put a starving child back on the road to health in as little as a month of treatment. It is also very inexpensive, which makes it even more effective in treating starvation around the world where poverty and famine prevail.

Plumpy Nut's formula requires no high tech or special preparation, and it stays good for months. Up to two years unopened. A peanut butter type paste, it's easy for kids to feed to themselves and the result is just what the doctors ordered — a rapid weight gain along with high energy, which is the difference between life and death for a young child suffering from malnutrition. And right now it is being used in all of the right places.

Applause please, for Medicins Sans Frontieres, and especially for M. Andre Briend, not only for doing what they did, but for pointing out to the world what we all should be doing. By showing us how doing what needs to be done works on a relatively small scale, it points out the possibilities that exist for the whole world. People who can do, get together and help out the people who can't. People who have provide for the people who have not.

There is an attitude here which, I believe, comes directly from their name, Doctors Without Borders. "Without Borders" is the operative phrase here. If the world didn't have borders, we would be so much better off. For starters, we wouldn't have border wars, and probably wouldn't have a lot of territorial skirmishes that have kept cropping up since, oh, the beginning of time.

Have you noticed that things that divide and gather people into separate and disparate groups are what has been causing all of our problems since we were able stand up and look to the other side of the valley? Just think, without borders, the Russians couldn't go around taking over countries whenever they feel like it. The Russians would just show up say, "This is ours." And everyone would say, "Okay. Knock yourselves out. We're going over to some other place and hang out. See ya."

They could go to, say, where Italy or France used to be and learn how to cook. Or, they could head for Spain and learn how to play the guitar and dance. Maybe head for the former Canada and learn to skate. To the old U.S.A. and learn to make money. To the former South America for coffee. To Japan or Germany to learn how to make stuff that works. Or to China for, what else, Chinese food.

The entire population of the world would be one nationality: Earthlings. A thousand years hence and we would all look the same — a nice suntanned look that we would all envy today. Organized religion would be replaced by human harmony with any luck. And we can look back and say, "It all started with Plumpy Nut." Vive la Plumpy Nut.

A short tail

MY FAMILY AND I LIVE with one English springer spaniel, one Labrador retriever, and the Labrador retriever's eight puppies which, thankfully, have all found homes. Spend time around this many dogs and you'll soon come to the same conclusion I have. That's right, you'll wish you had a tail.

Not having a tail is, in my estimation, the one major flaw in human anatomy, provided, of course, that you discount excessive height – which is basically defined as anything over five-foot-four.

The good news is that with the proper breeding, genetic manipulation, and numerous cosmetic surgeries, this will no longer be a problem for our descendants. If things go right, they will be short and have tails.

I was explaining this to my wife the other day and she gave me a strange look. So strange, in fact, that I couldn't tell what she was thinking. Which proves my point entirely – I wouldn't be guessing if she had a tail.

That's because tails, as we all know, are excellent indicators of mood.

All I'm saying is if we all had wagggers we'd get along so much better. Here's a solid example to prove my point. Imagine me, but this time with a beautifully feathered tail, the kind that's common on a golden retriever, walking down the street. Suddenly, I see a friend who I haven't met in years.

Upon recognition, my tail wags quickly. Well, you don't have to be a genius to comprehend that I'm genuinely happy to see him.

His tail, which is docked and short like a Doberman's, wags too. After all, I'm an old friend. But then he recalls the five bucks I owe him from high school and the cadence slows down a bit. Mine then stops completely and tucks in between my legs. Anyone, including that big jerk, can see that things just got awkward.

So, just like that, he quickly changes the subject, compliments me on my well-groomed tail, and says we ought to get together some time to have a drink or two and perhaps remove a few burrs. Once again, tails immediately commence wagging and we end our visit on a high note.

That's the beauty of having a tail, see? They help project emotions so that even insensitive jerks can see exactly how you feel.

I know, I know. At this point, you're probably thinking that having a tail might ruin you as a serious poker player. Well, that's simply untrue. All you need do is study the famous paintings of all those dogs playing cards to understand this. There's no way in heck that anyone can tell me for certain whether the Great Dane is bluffing or not. Why? He's sitting on his tail!

Please don't misunderstand me. I'm only referring to having a dog tail.

It would do us no good to have long, thick, rope-like tails like mountain lions. After all, these are strictly for balance. Okay, a tight-rope walker might want one but that's about it. But it wouldn't tell the world how happy or sad you were. Or the waitress which one of you was dominant in the group so she could take your order first.

And just think of how this simple add-on would revolutionize the United Nations or help in general psychiatric treatment – even my wife wished I had a tail, when I mentioned this, by the way.

It would also be useful in simple day-to-day negotiations like buying a car. "I see that my offer of $4,500 has both of our tails wagging quite a bit," you might say to the dealer you are haggling with. And you'd both know that you were close to closing the deal.

Better still, never again would a woman be able to play hard to get. If she liked you, her tail would wag nervously and you'd know it.

As you can see, there are many important advantages to humans having tails. So why is it that we haven't given this more effort yet? Am I the only one who is asking this all-important question?

I suspect the delay in acceptance has something to do with the crackpots in the fringe element. We probably all know a few whackos that suggest we should have fully working prehensile tails, just like the monkeys do. But, of course, that's laughable and it makes the rest of us look weird.

No, give me a dog tail or give me nothing.

Harper acts only when he wants

To the Editor:

Here we go again – a federal election. Prime Minister Harper now makes an election promise to reduce the excise tax on diesel fuel by two cents within the next four years if in office. However, when truckers picketed on Parliament Hill to reduce said tax it was he who said he couldn't do anything. Now all of a sudden he can do something – so he says. If there wasn't a federal election then the "I can't do anything" would prevail.

If he is also interested in helping those who need it why isn't he overhauling the Canada pension board? If anyone has to apply for Canada disability pension, God help them. I have been advised of horror stories especially the length of time for the board to make a decision on claims – more than six months up to two years.

One of the board qualifications is that your illness could lead to your death. If one has a terminal illness by the time the board makes their decision for qualification of benefits it could be too late. How does that help those going through such a traumatic time?

Another qualification is how much one has contributed to CPP. Lest we forget many Canadians have worked for minimum wage which was as low as 85 cents an hour and even less in the 1940s and 50s therefore qualifications for benefits based on contribution amounts from then to now is unrealistic.

What about people who have seasonal employment? Their contributions cannot be as much in relation to those who have year round employment.

What about those people who do not have coverage for health insurance, illness or injury and such illness or injury is not coverage by WCB?

Unless one has their own personal insurance coverage through a private company and can afford to pay for such one is at the mercy of Canada pension board.

I have heard promise after promise; however, not one of the candidates have made a commitment to overhaul the Canada pension board and I assume my letter will fall on deaf ears.

Reader calls for electoral reform

To the Editor:

The prime minister has just announced a national public opinion poll – a federal election. How I wish the Governor General had said “No, Parliament approved a law mandating elections every four years and you leaders must really work things out till then or rescind the law.”

Oh well, a real monarch might have done that but not the pale imitation we have. That's what happens when traditional institutions slide into decay. They fail us when most needed!

Yes, this is a national public opinion poll. We are no more likely to get what we voted for than a traditional public opinion poll results in the legislation we commented on. Of course, a public opinion poll comes with a disclaimer such as, “Accurate within two percentage points 19 times out of 20.” The exercise we are undertaking has no such assurance.

Maybe we will cast a ballot for a leader but not directly any of the ones who we will see in ads and photo ops. Perhaps we will vote for a local candidate, a representative, but the last one only enjoyed the support of less than 30 per cent of the local electorate. Perhaps we will focus on some issue, the economy or foreign policy, etc. but that issue will disappear behind the closed doors of some caucus or more likely prime minister's office and never reappear in recognizable legislation.

Here is a prediction: most electors will be disappointed, confused and unrepresented however the tally of ballots.

The only way out of this sorry situation is electoral reform.

Is Devolin proud of everything?

To The Editor:

So Barry Devolin is proud of his government's record over the last couple of years. He is proud of the promises they have kept. Is he proud of Harper cancelling the national childcare program? This would have saved young couples and single parent families real money, not a hundred dollars a month. What does that pay for, three trips or so to the day care?

Is Devolin proud that Canada will not even try to keep its commitment to the international Kyoto agreement? Harper did a great job of making his buddy George Bush happy on that one.

Is Barry proud that Harper broke the Kelowna Accord with our native leaders? Harper won't even build a school for our natives to be educated in. Nothing to be proud of that I can see; shame is more like it.

What about the promise to reduce waiting times for operations? Funny, Barry doesn't mention that promise or the one about having an open government. Harper is the most secretive and manipulative prime minister we have ever seen. Just ask any reporter how easy it is to gain access to government information.

Is Devolin proud of the manual Harper distributed to Conservative MPs outlining for them how to disrupt parliamentary committees? Harper has no use for parliament so why bother electing MPs and holding committee meetings? After all, the only thing we really need is Steve. There is no Conservative team. There is just team Harper and he likes it that way.

As far as I can see there is precious little to be proud of when you have a record like that. Maybe that's why they keep pointing out that Dion's Green Shift will cause the sky to fall. I guess if we keep looking up we won't see Harper's record of shame.

Young candidate is impressive

To the Editor:

I have just recently met my local NDP candidate Stephen Yardy. I am fascinated by how well he represents himself at age 18. As a young person I really like the fact that he encourages young people and is a good role model for kids in the community. He is interested in helping small businesses and for my family that is excellent news – we are aware of the work involved in owning a small business. He too is the son of a small business owner.

Some councils struggle, some squander

To the Editor:

Dysart council is struggling with a request for $15,000 towards a project with the good of the community at its heart. The councillors of Dysart feel a responsibility to its taxpayers before approving such an expenditure.

Contrast that with the council of Algonquin Highlands. They have already squandered a reserve of over $200,000 to acquire property for a crosswind runway before the results of a feasibility study has even been presented. And they are going ahead with plans to spend upwards of $2.8 million on that runway without even consulting the taxpayers to whom they are responsible. It begs the question: Why?

Why are they subjecting the taxpayers of our township to paying for an airport expansion – an airport that is already costing us many thousands of dollars?

No wonder our economy is down

To the Editor:

Re: Goodbye to the Summer that never was, Echo, September 2

We have to look past our hand. "Life is change."

We have a very fragile situation in Haliburton and the Haliburton Highlands. There is an obvious reason that our region is the most economically suppressed in the province. We, as a group, should be ashamed of this fact.

It is a well known fact that we are a seniors community with a high rate of government assistance – welfare or employment insurance. There are very limited job opportunities and an extremely high number of seasonal workers with winter unemployment at approximately 35 per cent. We have too many low-paying tourism and retail jobs with their mere existence depending on the weather, gas prices and the overall economy.

The local merchants are making a clear statement in last week's article that tourism is what fuels our towns. Two or three bad weather summers in a row due to global warming, elevated gas prices and the Canadian dollar could mean total disaster for our merchants. Without tourism, our northern towns would be ghost towns.

We need tourism but we should not be depending solely on it. We need to diversify our portfolio, improve our economic status. It cannot be accomplished by one person only, or the local merchants, or even our political representatives. Total involvement, co-operation and dedication is needed to move in one direction without conflict to stimulate the economy in this area and be less dependent on tourism.

What would be ideal is to entice five or six quality small businesses employing about 50 persons each to set up in the Haliburton area. Give them concessions and perks. Aggressive recruiting as is being done with trying secure more doctors in our area. That would be money well spent.

The successful Patient News is a good example. It provides reasonably well-paying jobs and year-round employment. Great for our economy.

We need jobs as well as affordable housing, not luxury condos. With a new infusion of employment comes money to strengthen the local economy, as well as the need for additional housing in the area. Until such time, there should be a halt to all luxury housing and condos. Right now there is a desperate need for affordable housing.

Change is needed before it's too late.

Ski area opens doors to bikers, hikers and artists

Bishop says new state-of-the-art chairs have been added to the far quad and that significant landscaping and fencing at the entrance to the chalet is complete. Staff and volunteers have been busy mapping out and cutting mountain bike trails that will open in the summer of 2009.

The Bishop family opened the Highlands' only ski resort more than 40 years ago. Today, more and more ski resorts are staying open during the summer.

Sir Sam's Ski Area offers beautiful vantage points all year round. This file photo was taken at one of its Thanksgiving open houses. After the ski season ends next March, the Eagle Lake business will remain open to attract all kinds of outdoor recreationists.

"It's tough being a business if you're only open for four months of the year," said Chris, who runs the business with his parents, brothers and sister.

When asked why the family has never contemplated keeping the business open year-round before, Bishop said, "It's just the stage the business has evolved to after 44 years. We see the potential."

The popularity of mountain biking is the biggest push and in 2009 people will be able to mountain bike, both cross country and down hill, ride the chair to the top for a panoramic view of Eagle Lake, go for a hike, enjoy a picnic lunch or a Kawartha Dairy ice cream cone, and visit the arts and crafts gallery where local artists' work will be sold.

"We may try to do some guest appearances but nothing has been carved in stone yet," Bishop said.

The plan for 2009 is to open full-time in July and August and move to weekends from September to Thanksgiving.

Sir Sam's is hosting an open house on Saturday, October 11, and Bishop invites the community to bring their mountain bikes and ride the trails for free.

Important year for young hockey players

Cody Hodgson finds out if he joins Canucks or Matt Duchene on Brampton Battalion

MATT JAMES

Staff Reporter

Hockey season is just around the corner and Haliburton hockey heroes Cody Hodgson and Matt Duchene are about to start the most significant year of their hockey careers.

While Duchene knows that he'll play a major role on this year's Brampton Battalion squad, Hodgson's season and where he will play is still up in the air.

Will the 18-year-old Vancouver Canucks draft pick head back to the OHL and compete for a Memorial Cup with Duchene and the Battalion? Or will his hard work join forces with some good luck and see him live out his dream of playing in the NHL sooner rather than later?

The two friends attended the Battalion camp in late August and participated in on- and off-ice training. The Battalion went 3-1-1 in five exhibition games and Hodgson had two goals and three points in two of those games before heading to Vancouver on September 10 for the Canucks' rookie training camp.

"I've got my bags packed and I'm looking forward to the whole experience," said Hodgson, who was 10th in the NHL's latest draft, on the Battalion website. "I'm hoping to stay out there as long as possible."

There is plenty of video footage of young Hodgson on the Canucks website, <http://canucks.nhl.com>. The fact that Hodgson spent much of the summer working out with Dave Gagner, a former NHLer and the Canucks' director of player development, makes Hodgson's quest that much more interesting.

Gagner's son Sam was the only 18-year-old to play in the NHL last year, an accomplishment that Hodgson would love to copy. And while it is possible, it's no easy task.

In a Canucks' online article, Jeff Paterson wrote, "While management has suggested that Hodgson will be given every opportunity to play his way on to the big club, he'd have to be considered a long shot at this point. But turning heads at this weekend's prospects camp would be a great way for Hodgson to introduce himself to the city and the organization."

The rookie camp brought 22 players to General Motors Place on September 12 for pre-training camp medicals and testing. On-ice sessions were September 13 and 14 and then players travelled to Camrose, Alberta yesterday for a game against the Calgary Flames Prospects and the Edmonton Oilers Prospects on September 16.

In the Oilers game Hodgson will face former Brampton teammate, goaltender Bryan Pitton.

If a spot is available on this year's Canucks roster and management is choosing by position from their list of prospects, Hodgson would be up against only one other centreman, fifth round pick Prab Rai of Surrey, B.C.

Cody Hodgson, who spent some of the summer at his family's Haliburton Lake cottage, is in Alberta today to find out if he'll be donning a Canucks jersey this fall.

Duchene

In Brampton, Duchene feels he's right where he needs to be at this time of year. In three games the 17-year-old tallied three goals and one assist. "I'm really excited for this upcoming season and I think I'm well prepared," said Duchene in an email to the Echo.

At this time of year OHL rosters are filled with uncertainty as NHL prospects like Hodgson are trying to crack roster spots. This means OHL rosters aren't finalized until late September.

"I think our team this year, given we get most of our NHL drafted guys back, will be just as good or better than last year's," said Duchene. "We have some very talented forwards and goalies with a solid support staff on defence."

Duchene is rooting for his boyhood buddy but knows what Hodgson can bring to the ice in Brampton.

"Obviously a guy like Cody can really benefit our team with his talent and his leadership but if it's time for him to move on to the next step then I'll be totally happy for him," Duchene said. "I hope he does well out there at camp. However, if he does come back, I know everyone will be very happy to have him for another year."

Regardless of who's in the line up for the Battalion's September 19 home opener against the Ottawa 67s, Duchene is confident the team is a contender to be the top of the league.

"Our team has a good combo of older and younger players that have lots of talent and lots to bring to the table," he said.

While Duchene has worn the "A" in the recent exhibition games he doesn't know if he'll don any letters during the regular season.

"We have a lot of good leaders on the team but if I am given the opportunity to wear a letter I think I can do a good job in that role," he said.

As Hodgson makes headlines in Vancouver, Duchene is gaining clout in right here in Ontario. On The Sports Network's (TSN) evening sports news show, Sports Centre, hockey insider Bob McKenzie did a small feature about the pre-season top 10 players for the 2009 NHL Entry Draft.

A pre-season poll by scouts voted Duchene as number four on the list but McKenzie said if the top two prospects, Sweden's Victor Hedman and Ontario's John Tavares falter, that Duchene and another prospect Jared Cowan are seen as "legitimate threats to step up."

To view the feature visit <http://watch.tsn.ca>.

characters – commonly as deer during hunting season – the strip offered a second look at accepted social norms.

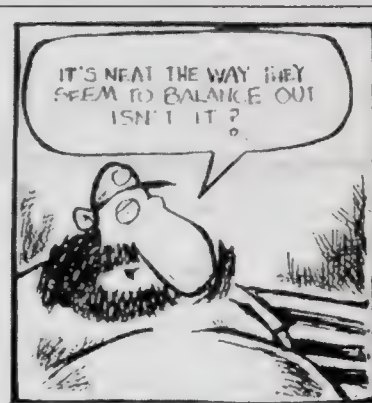

"Boonieville was never 'about' Haliburton but you certainly saw Haliburton in its characters and themes," says Echo editor Martha Perkins, who remembers when Teljeur first pitched the idea for the cartoon.

"What I liked about Boonieville is the way the humour crept up on you from the side and surprised you," she says. "Everything and everyone was recognizable but Charlie had a way of making it all seem new and fresh. You never knew what to expect. He could be quite daring and audacious and yet he was never mean. He poked fun at life with a velvet-covered pencil. We'll all be sad to say goodbye – who's going to laugh at all of our foibles?"

Teljeur said he tried to keep himself and Haliburton politics out of his work as much as he could, since it was syndicated around the country, but there have been notable exceptions.

Boonieville was the location of his wedding proposal to his wife and has also made reference to the subsequent divorce. On a lighter note, the cartoon has also addressed Teljeur's distaste for Haliburton's parking metres a couple of times – one of the only local issues that seems to get under his skin.

JENN WATT/ECHO

We think that this Boonieville cartoon, published May 12, 1992, was the first Boonieville cartoon that the Echo published. Its creator, Charlie Teljeur, above, drew his last Boonieville this week. He's moving on to other projects.

"I'll carry that issue to my death," he said, recalling the one time he got a parking ticket in Haliburton. "It was $5 paid in change – broken change so someone would have to sort the coins individually," he laughed.

And now that the strip has reached its end, you can know a Boonieville secret: every time there was a snowman in the comic it was because he was feeling lazy.

"If there's a snowman in the cartoon I didn't feel like drawing," he said.

Teljeur also does hockey cartoons for CBC, the Toronto Sun and the Hockey News magazine. Although he already writes for the thehockeynews.com, he wants to expand his repertoire into cultural, analytical magazine-style writing.

"I also have other interests. The hockey season ends in July and I can't just take the summer off. I'd like to expand beyond the sports market," he said.

Teljeur's starting that journey with a solo road trip to Austin, Texas, for the Austin City Limits music festival. The trip is almost totally unplanned other than the festival and Teljeur plans to keep an online journal of the experience at charlieteljeur.com.

Hydro turns it on for Cardiff

From left, Calvin Stein, a union trade supervisor with Hydro One, presents Highlands East Reeve Dave Burton, Deputy-reeve Jim Mackie, and Cardiff Community Association president Steve Kauffelt with a cheque for $10,000 during last Tuesday's council meeting. The money, which is part of a Hydro One PowerPlay grant, will go toward improving the park and outdoor rink facilities in Cardiff.

"Hydro One's contribution will help community members to play, have fun, and enjoy physical fitness for years to come, in a safe and secure environment," said Kauffelt.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

DISCLOSING DEFECTS

QUESTION: Is it important for home sellers to disclose any and all material defects that could affect the value or livability of a home?

ANSWER: The days of closing the sale and letting the buyers discover problems about the home for themselves are long gone. Most sellers need to go to great lengths to inform potential buyers about important facts concerning the home.

The intent of the disclosure laws is that all of the facts need to be put on the table — with nothing hidden — so that all parties can then negotiate in good faith with full knowledge of the condition of the home. Many provinces have mandatory disclosure rules.

SELLERS should disclose all defects which could affect the value or livability of their home.

Old friendships kept new at Bonnie View

MATT JAMES

Staff Reporter

Not many people who are in their eighties still associate with friends they met in high school, but in early September a special group of friends gathered in Haliburton to renew friendships formed more than 60 years ago.

The organizers of a special reunion at Bonnie View Inn, Stan Boyd and Dave Beveridge, have been friends since 1937. The two met in Toronto east's Balmy Beach Public School when they were 10. Years later, in fifth form (the equivalent of a fifth year in high school) at Malvern Collegiate, the two formed other friendships that would last, literally, a lifetime.

The group of 16 friends is made up of eight couples, all but one still married to the same person they wed more than 50 years ago. The odd couple, as it were, has been married for 44 years.

Couples have been getting together for past 13 years

They've been getting together regularly since 1995 and for the past five years the couples, aged 74 to 81, have gathered at the Bonnie View Inn. Prior to that they alternated visits between Bonnie View and Windermere House in Muskoka.

"And up until about six years ago we used to meet every other year," said Boyd. "Then we thought we better start doing this every year 'cause we don't know how many more years we've got left."

And while their wrinkles and slower movements testify to their age, it is obvious that their attitudes, minds, and hearts have years of catching up to do.

"We've had various illnesses but we're all still here," said Beveridge. "And let's just say we all feel we have our marbles."

"We just don't know what colour they are," added one of the wives, followed by a roar of laughter.

In a group that size, with so much life experience, there was no shortage of one-liners.

In 1951, Boyd and his wife Audrey honeymooned at the Bonnie View Inn and another couple celebrated an anniversary there. Others have visited the area previously and two or three couples had cottages in the area.

They have all kept in touch since their time at Malvern and often shared special occasions together. Weddings also kept them busy for a while, as one man was almost always another's best man.

But don't they ever get tired of each other?

"We all get along really well," said Beveridge.

"We're like 18-year-olds when we get together," said another woman. "We tell the same stories again and again each year and we never get tired of them."

If the fact that these people are still friends and still make an effort to see each other after all these years doesn't astound you, then consider the following statistics:

Of the 16, 94 per cent are email literate; only 18.75 per cent need the support of a cane; between them they have 45 grandchildren; and in all of their time as friends they've only lost one member. In addition, the sum of ages of the eight men exceeds 500.

A common interest that keeps them together, as couples and as friends, is the game of golf.

"It used to be sex," one man joked.

"Well," I said, "golf's a good substitute."

"Well...I wouldn't say good," added a woman, causing even more laughter.

For years an essential part of the friends' visit to the Highlands is to play a round of golf before heading to McKeck's Place for a bite of lunch.

"They always call to let us know they're coming," said Karen Frybort, the restaurant's manager. This year Frybort decided to spice things up a little. When the group arrived, the outdoor sandwich board read, "Today's Special: The Malvern Burger".

Henry Adams, an American novelist, journalist, historian and academic once said, "One friend in a lifetime is much; two are many; three are hardly possible."

Wonder what he'd say to having 16.

If you can't beat them, join them on the road

GREG HOEKSTRA

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the September 9 meeting of Highlands East council.

After struggling for years to keep motorized vehicles off Dark Lake Road, council is now wondering whether the best solution is to simply re-open the road to traffic.

As it stands now the road is supposed to be used as a walking trail only. However, ever since it was closed in 2002, nearby residents have complained that ATVs are using the road, making it unsafe for pedestrians.

Previous council closed the road in 2002 because of its close proximity to the water. Not only was the road being undermined by erosion, but winter maintenance led to unwanted salt in the water.

In the past, councillor Gary Stoughton has protested that the road never should have been closed because it limits public access to the lake and sets a dangerous precedent.

Council didn't discuss the matter in great detail at last week's meeting, but it was suggested that the municipality should look into how much it would cost to re-open the road.

If council does consider re-opening the road there would have to be a public meeting, just as there was to close it six years ago.

Fire calls on the rise

Calls to the Highlands East fire department continue to climb in comparison to last year.

In August fire chief Bill Wingrove said there were 30 calls to the department, which brings this year's total number of calls to 169.

Last year at this time Wingrove said there were only 137 calls.

Wingrove said the bulk of this year's calls have been medical assists. Of the 30 calls in August, 20 were medical assists. Only four calls of 30 were for fires – one for a house trailer fire, two for brush fires, and one for a house that was struck by lightning.

Wingrove also noted that the Highlands East fire department was the first to respond to the plane crash on the boundary between Highlands East and the neighbouring municipality of Hastings Highlands.

"We were there first and secured the scene," Wingrove told council.

As it turns out, the plane crash later made national headlines after it was discovered that Barenaked Ladies singer Ed Robertson was one of four people on board.

Backpacks for Kids

As if saving lives isn't enough, members of the Highlands East fire department are also giving back to the community in other ways.

Last month volunteer firefighters from stations four and five donated $500 to Bell Canada's Backpacks for Kids program.

The program supplies backpacks stuffed with school supplies to local families in financial need.

Councillor Suzanne Partridge praised the department for making the donation and said it would go a long way in helping families across Highlands East.

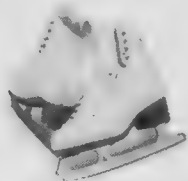

"It's a great program," said Partridge. "And they make sure that every kid gets a different backpack. That way there's no social stigma attached."

Sharpen those skates

Council has given a green light for municipal employees to begin putting the ice back into the Wilberforce arena.

Environmental/property supervisor Glen Covert said the process usually takes two to three weeks, since they must first freeze the ground before they can put the ice in.

Councillor Gary Stoughton said putting the ice in early is a good idea so that local kids can get a chance to practise before hockey season starts.

While the ice should be in by early October, arena rentals won't begin until October 18.

Power of Intention

Highlands East resident Luann Coghlan is hoping to host a series of self-help workshops and weekly gatherings at the Lloyd Watson Centre this fall.

Coghlan said the workshops, which she calls "The Power of Intention," will be open to anyone 16 years of age or older. Topics covered will include weight loss, becoming more active, and positive thinking.

There will be no required admission fee for the seminars, though Coghlan said group members will be asked for a voluntary $5 donation in order to help cover costs.

Coghlan said the series would help "empower our community" and bring together residents of all ages. Together, the group will listen to and watch CDs and DVDs from popular self-help website www.hayhouse.com.

She's requested the township waive its rental fees and provide space for the group's meetings at the community centre free-of-charge.

Meetings are scheduled to run Monday night from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning October 6.

For more information call Coghlan at (705) 448-1589.

Investing in Ontario

CAO Sharon Stoughton-Craig told council that Highlands East has qualified for $177,568 under the province's Investing in Ontario Act.

The announcement was made at the 2008 AMO Conference in Ottawa late last month.

Stoughton-Craig said the money must be used for infrastructure needs in the municipality, such as work on roads, bridges and culverts.

Council agreed to discuss how to spend the money at their next meeting, scheduled for September 23.

Highlands East tries new bear deterrent

Council is planning to use "scare and sting" to shoo them away

GREG HOEKSTRA

Staff Reporter

Highlands East is planning to use a "scare and sting" tactic to keep bears from visiting landfills during business hours.

Last Tuesday Deputy-reeve Jim Mackie said he was growing more and more concerned for people's safety, given the high number of bear sightings at dumps in recent weeks.

As a result, Mackie argued it was time for the municipality to take action before someone gets seriously injured.

"This can't go on with people going to the landfill to see the bears," said Mackie. "It might take 15 years, it might take five years, or it might be this weekend, but sooner or later someone's going to get whacked."

While it was suggested in the past that the township put up fencing around dumps to keep out bears, Mackie said he believes fencing would only aggravate the situation by cutting off the bears' food source.

"These bears are animals and they need to eat," he said. "They're hungry, they need to eat, and we would be driving them into town."

Instead, Mackie said Highlands East should use fireworks and rubber bullets to scare and sting the animals and condition them to run away whenever they see a human.

He added that he had no problem with the bears eating at landfills in the evening, just so long as they know to "get the heck out of there" whenever they see a person or car coming.

With the blessing of the township's environmental and property supervisor Glen Covert, council has agreed to give the system a try if it will reduce the number of human encounters with bears.

Mackie said he's already spoken to officials from the local Ministry of Natural Resources office, who have agreed to help Highlands East deal with the bear problem.

Community hospice training begins September 24

Many people in Haliburton County experiencing a palliative illness or Alzheimer's Disease need more support than family and friends can provide. Their family members and caregivers also need support throughout the process. If you want to support individuals experiencing a life-threatening illness, grieving the death of a loved one, or coping with Alzheimer's disease, please consider becoming a community hospice volunteer.

It is not at all unusual to feel uncertain about what to do or say for someone who is facing or grieving the loss of a loved one, or coping with Alzheimer's. This course will help give you a greater understanding of how to be helpful in these difficult life situations.

The course includes 45 hours of training on a variety of topics including:

- active listening skills
- attitudes and values
- communicating with someone who is dying, or someone with dementia
- understanding the grieving process
- impact on the family

Sessions are interactive, with lots of opportunities for discussion and sharing. You'll also job shadow a current hospice volunteer.

The course starts September 24. Cost for the entire course is $50, which includes all course materials.

To register, or for more information, contact Marilyn Rydberg, training facilitator, SIRCH Community Services and Consulting, at 457-1742 ex 42 or e-mail info@sirch.on.ca

Calling all writers, readers and speakers

A new group is scheduled to begin meeting soon at R.D. Lawrence Place in Minden. It is for those who love to read and also want to enhance communication skills. It is for writers of all kinds, speakers, and those who wish to spice up conversation. It would also be ideal for teachers and community leaders.

Meetings will have dual aspects:

1. to briefly study some published successes
2. to use their work as inspiration to create

Each meeting will focus upon one particular skill: e.g. story beginnings, character, humour, etc. This could be later fitted into diaries, memoirs, articles, fiction, or conversation.

This will be a constructive group aimed at fun and personal development. It will be co-ordinated by a trained Toastmaster. It will have many opportunities for participation for those who wish.

The first meeting is slated for Wednesday, September 17 from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. If you are interested please simply come along to R.D. Lawrence Place. For more information call Linda at 705-489-3661.

First female bishop visits St. Margaret's

Right Reverend Linda Nicholls gave local congregations an uplifting message

History was made when the Right Reverend Linda Nicholls, area bishop for the Trent Durham Region Diocese of Toronto, led the service of Holy Eucharist at St. Margaret's Anglican Church, Wilberforce on Sunday, September 14. This was the first visit of a female bishop to St. Margaret's.

Hilda Clark

Bishop Nicholls earlier in the day had led a Confirmation Service at St. George's in Haliburton.

Bishop Nicholls preached an uplifting message which included the significance of this Sunday,

Holy Cross Day. Special music was provided by a trio of Sandra Bramham, Margaret Jeske and Mark Bramham. Guest organist was Eleanor Cooper. Following the service the bishop and the congregation enjoyed fellowship and good food at a fine luncheon.

The "90" Club was joined by another well-known resident last Friday. Ross Agnew celebrated his 90th birthday on September 12 at a well-attended open house at his home. It was organized by his daughter Laurie Gibbs and her family. Laurie came from Geraldton along with family from there and Hamilton to celebrate this important occasion with dad, grandpa and great grandpa Ross. Son Barry Agnew and some of his family from Oshawa were also part of this happy gathering.

As well as family and Wilberforce friends the party included many of Ross's friends from Gooderham. Ross and his late wife Vicki resided in Gooderham for a number of years where they operated a Red and White general store and where Vicki served as reeve of Glamorgan.

Ross, the eldest son of Fred and Mary Ellen Agnew, was born in Bancroft in 1918 when the family lived there. He grew up and attended school in Wilberforce then took further studies in the Toronto area. As a young man working in the family business here he met and married Victoria (Vicki) Raines while she was serving as a Red Cross Outpost nurse in Wilberforce. When they closed their business in Gooderham they resided in their new home in Wilberforce. Ross still lives comfortably in that home with lots of love and care especially from members of his late brother Murray's family who are always nearby to lend a hand. Among his good friends are the bridge club buddies with whom he plays almost every week.

We extend best wishes to Ross for good health and happiness for many more years.

Several from St. Margaret's Wilberforce participated in a Choral Evensong service at St. George's Haliburton on Sunday September 14, 2008. Organist Bill Gliddon and the St. George's Choir were in great musical form as people and clergy from many churches in the Haliburton-Victoria Deanery gathered for worship and praise. This Deanery Council event was initiated by its chairperson, Earl Cooper who welcomed everyone and read the first lesson. Glenda Burke led the service with a lesson read by Eleanor Cooper.

The Rev. Sharon Towne of the Fenelon Falls/Coboconk parish spoke about her recent experience as a delegate from the women of the Toronto Anglican Diocese to a United Nations conference in New York on the economic status of women. Contributing to developing the policy for the UN, working with people of many different faiths from countries worldwide, was a challenge and a very worthwhile experience. Seeing Rev. Towne wearing her clerical collar which identified her as clergy, was a surprising and enlightening experience for female delegates from other countries and churches where women are not allowed to serve as clergy.

This evensong was a joyous evening bringing worshippers to Haliburton from Lindsay to Wilberforce, Minden to Bobcaygeon and all parts in between.

Find out what the Legion does for your community

The week of September 21 to 28 is Legion Week all over Ontario. It is a time for everyone to feel free to drop into your local branch and find out what the Legion is all about. You may even find that you would like to join the branch.

The Legion is about our veterans who are serving now and who have served. These men and women have put their lives on the line for your freedom, and if only to participate in the poppy campaign you would be doing an awful lot.

You could spend as little as two hours or as many hours as you like to help out with this very worthwhile campaign. After all it is our veterans and their families who benefit from the money that is raised in our community.

So feel free to drop into the Legion and say hello. There are darts, pool and shuffleboard in the clubroom.

Hope to see you there.

What's the worst road?

In continuing their commitment to ensuring safer roads for all motorists, CAA is thrilled to be a part of Ontario's sixth annual Worst Roads Campaign. This year's campaign will focus on the negative impact Ontario's crumbling roads and bridges have on your vehicle, the environment and your health. In addition, the campaign will also call on all levels of government to provide long term sustainable funding for improving municipal roads and bridges.

Starting September 9, motorists will be able to make their voices heard by casting a ballot in Ontario at participating CAA Travel Centres, Approved Automotive Repair Service (AARS) locations, or by going on-line at www.worstroads.ca. In addition, voters will have the opportunity to share their vote and comments with their mayor, reeve, the Premier of Ontario and/or the Prime Minister.

NOTICE

Township of Algonquin Highlands

TAKE NOTICE that on September 18, 2008 at their regular meeting, commencing at 1:00 p.m. Council for the Township of Algonquin Highlands will be receiving final technical information and specifications concerning the proposed development plans for the Haliburton-Stanhope Municipal Airport. Interested parties are invited to attend to listen to this initial presentation.

AND TAKE NOTICE THAT on September 20, 2008 commencing at 10:00 a.m. Council will host a public forum for a further presentation to all interested members of the public. This meeting will be held at the Dorset Recreation Centre located 1051 Main Street, Dorset in the Township of Algonquin Highlands.

Honour veterans during Legion Week

Don't forget that Legion Week is coming up September 21 to 27. It's a special week set aside for our veterans of past and present. It is a week to remember those that paid the supreme sacrifice by defending our Canada in past and present conflicts, so that we as Canadians can live in the freedom that we have today!

Our community Legion, along with the Ladies Auxiliary, work together to raise funds to support many programs within Ontario Command of the Royal Canadian Legion and within our own area. It is one of the best kept secrets but our branch supports numerous programs benefiting our seniors and youth within our community such as the Food For Kids Program at Wilberforce E.S., our local children's hockey teams, bursary assistance for children and grandchildren of Legion members and war veterans and much more.

Please plan on joining us during Legion Week for special events that members have planned in celebration and honour of our veterans. Remember your Legion is there for our veterans, our seniors and our youth. On Saturday, September 27 we will be holding our Veterans' Dinner starting at 6 p.m..

We ask you to bring the family out to meet our community veterans. Our veterans represent a living history. By learning about their experiences we can come to understand not just the horrors of war but what it took to build our society after the war. It will give them an understanding of the elements of our Canadian identity as our veterans lived through a piece of history that changed the lives of all Canadians.

If you have a family member who was a veteran please bring a picture of them in military attire to place on our memorial table. It will give children the opportunity to view our veterans as young people just like them and let them see the profound contribution they made to their country at such a young age. Please be sure to label all pictures with as much information as possible, as well as your address so we can get the pictures back to you safely. Please contact Luann at 448-1589 for further information.

The branch is looking for members for the colour party for upcoming annual Remembrance Day service. Please contact our Sergeant-at-Arms, Tom Coghlan, if you would like to take part in this special memorial service.

September 21 from 1 to 4 p.m. there will a special event taking place at the Legion. Gertrude Godfrey is turning 80. No she doesn't look or act like it, but what a gal! All family and friends are invited to join Gertrude at the Legion for lots of laughter as you walk down memory lane with Gertrude. So bring lots of fond memories to share and please, "best wishes only."

We have a new entertainment committee: Brian Eves, Mary Eves, Luann Coghlan and Hillary Klapow. If you have any good ideas pass them on to them.

New Winter hours: Sunday noon - 6 p.m.; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday 2 p.m. - 9 p.m.; Friday and Saturday 12 noon - 1:00 a.m.

Things are continuing to look up at Branch 624. Along with the new décor our Legion has caught up to the dot.com generation and now has high speed Internet. This will facilitate receiving news and getting news out at a faster pace.

We wish to give special thanks to Dave Harrison, bid euchre players and the Legion Ladies Auxiliary for their generous donations to the branch. It is costly to keep our Legion open and make improvements upon our facilities. Donations such as these are greatly appreciated.

We are very pleased to see Bob Hayward is now home from the hospital. Best wishes for continued recovery are sent to Bob from all his comrades at the Legion.

In order for our Legion branch to win an early bird award, next year's dues must be paid by November 30. Please bring in a cheque, money order or cash in the amount of $38. This will ensure that your membership is paid up and you will continue to receive your Legion magazine without interruption. Your support of your Legion is greatly valued. Please see membership chairman Richard Young for further details.

Our branch continues to seek out individuals who would be interested in a bus trip to Rama. We require 45 people to make a commitment and then we can set a date for this fun trip and it will be a great deal at just $10 per person for bus ride and meal. This trip is open to non Legion members as well. Just drop by and put your name on the list. Upcoming events:

September 15 and 22: 7 p.m. Bid euchre $2 per person

September 17 and 24: 7:30 p.m. Open darts $1 per person

September 18: 1 p.m. Open euchre $2 per person

3rd annual Book Gala features C.S. Richardson

Meet at the Great Hall at Fleming College on Sunday, October 19

C.S. Richardson's novel The End of the Alphabet will be featured at the annual book gala hosted by the Friends of the Haliburton County Library.

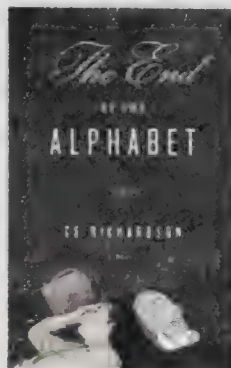

The Friends of the Haliburton County Library 3rd annual Book Gala is on Sunday, October 19 at 2 p.m. in the Great Hall at Fleming College. The featured author is C.S. Richardson, whose debut novel, The End of the Alphabet, was published to acclaim by Doubleday Canada.

Tickets to the gala cost $15 and are available at Master's Book Store and Undercover Books in Haliburton, as well as Minden Books and Stationery. Copies of The End of the Alphabet are available at these book stores and at each branch of the county's libraries.

Jack Brezina will once again act as emcee for the event and will take questions from the audience for Richardson. The event is co-sponsored by the Haliburton Bookers Circle, who will be providing coffee and dessert.

The End of the Alphabet is an award-winning novel. In 2008 it won the Commonwealth Writer's Prize for the Best First Novel (Canada and the Caribbean region). It was also named the Best Book of 2007 by the Globe and Mail, who described it in a review as "elegant and witty" and "a gem of a book." It is a travel story about a man who, with only one month to live, visits with his wife new and well-loved places in Europe and North Africa from A to Z. More than just a travel log, however, the novel is a fable, a reflection on loss and relationships, and, most importantly, a moving love story. Only 140 pages long, it is an engaging and memorable read.

C.S. Richardson is no stranger to the book publishing world. He has worked for more than 20 years as a book designer for Random House and McClelland and Stewart and at present is vice-president and creative director at Random House. He is the recipient of seven Alcuin Awards, the highest award for book design in Canada and his work has been exhibited at the Frankfurt and Leipzig Book Fairs in Europe. His book designs include The Bedside Book of Birds by Graeme Gibson, The Navigator of New York by Wayne Johnson, Bloodletting and Miraculous Cures by Vincent Lam and All that Matters by Wayson Choy, for which he received first prize. The End of the Alphabet is Richardson's first work of fiction, but currently he is at work on a second novel. A noted speaker on publishing, design and communications, he will be an interesting and informative guest at our Gala.

Friends of the Library, book club members, book lovers, illustrators, artists, writers and the general public are all invited to the Gala. For more information call 447-2402.

Foreign visitors laud Highlands attractions

TED MORRIS

Special to the Echo

The visitors from Romania could not say enough about the attractions that Haliburton had to offer. A delegation from Eastern Europe was here as guests of the Friendship Force of the Haliburton Highlands.

"They were here the same week the Echo ran a report about tourism being down because of the price of gas," noted the Haliburton club's president, Bob Cole. Hosts from Hamilton/Burlington were entertaining California and Nevada members at their summer cottages. It seemed like a natural thing for everyone to gather Tuesday afternoon at the Haliburton Sculpture Forest.

The Romanians had been to Winnipeg and were getting some rest and relaxation before heading home. But they felt more at home in Haliburton because the Highlands had the same rolling and rugged terrain and the same kinds of trees, like

Visiting Romanians feel at home in Haliburton wilderness

maple and birch.

What did they like? Fishing. Shopping for clothes (they even went as far afield as Bobcaygeon) and leather shoes. The dollar stores were heaven.

"What are you shopping for?" they were asked.

"Everything! Lots of kids and friends back home are expecting souvenirs."

Edit and Marius Stoianvici, social workers back home, packed a suitcase loaded with books about their profession, picked up in Haliburton. (The excess baggage charges would be murder.)

Language was a challenge but not a difficulty. "Edit" is pronounced almost like "Edith" and "Gheorghe" of course is "George."

Big events were the log chute, pancakes at the Wintergreen Barn, canoeing at Wanakita, and the fish hatchery. Brian and Sandre Daost of Haliburton led the tour of the Sculpture Forest and provided the commentary, which was translated probably for the first time in Romanian.

Friendship Force appears to be making a contribution to tourism. Earlier this year the club had a delegation from the Isle of Wight in the U.K.

Will the Romanians be back?

"We'd like to," said Maria Pasca. "We'll tell our friends and show them the photographs."

Constantin Zaharesch takes a stroll through the stone wall structure entitled "C to C."

EASY TO ARRANGE • EASY TO CARRY • SIMPLE

The starting line was full of participants walking, running and cycling to show their support for Terry Fox and to raise money for cancer research.

Sunday's Terry Fox Run was number 27 for Moe Welch who munches on a banana upon finishing the 10-kilometre event.

Christina Stephen, 10, of Haliburton gulps down some Gatorade after the event.

Barrie and Susan Maxwell of Haliburton have been participating in the Terry Fox Run since 1989.

Haliburton would make Terry Fox proud

Since the first Haliburton Terry Fox Run in September 1981, Haliburton has raised nearly $100,000 for cancer research. This year 66 participants raised more than $2,500 through donations and pledges both online and through canvassing.

Head organizer Aggie Tose and eight volunteers, registered walkers, runners, and bikers supplied participants with nourishment and water at the halfway point (the Haliburton Highlands golf course) and finish line.

While Sunday's event was a warm and humid one, it was nothing compared to the weather Fox encountered back in 1980 as he ran his Marathon of Hope from the Atlantic Ocean in St. John's Newfoundland to Thunder Bay, where he was forced to stop running due to a recurrence of cancer.

Today the Terry Fox Run for cancer has raised more than $400-million worldwide.

VanLieshouts wait to celebrate 50th

Eleanor Cooper

Congratulations to Maria and Lawrence VanLieshout on the celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary. Although the actual date was April 12, the VanLieshouts waited and planned for September 13 and 14, 2008 so that relatives from afar could plan to attend. The Frost Centre was the venue for accommodation, meals and entertainment.

Two of Larry's sisters came from Holland. Relatives from upstate New York attended and people from Cornwall, Ottawa, and Sarnia as well as local friends and family, about 120 in all. Entertainment consisted of a drumming circle, canoe races, G.P.S. treasure hunt, and a variety of music. Melissa Stephens entertained at the piano in the afternoon during dinner and a local band performed in the evening for dancing.

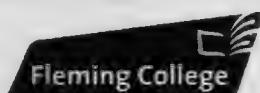

The gathering was blessed also by the 9 a.m. Sunday Mass led by Father Leahy with musical accompaniment by Toos Reid and Rose Berry. My thanks to Louise Van Den Hoogen and Juliane VanLieshout for supplying the details for this special occasion.

Our sympathy to Karl and Allan Upton and their families in the passing of their mother Laura at Hyland Crest last week. The funeral was held at Monk's and burial at the Maple Lake United Church cemetery was followed by the reception at the centre. The family is so well known and respected as indicated by the large numbers who attended to acknowledge the passing of one of the oldest residents from Maple Lake.

If you would like crab apples to make jelly, call in and I'll direct you to the tree nearby which has produced the best and most apples for jelly.

A choral evening, planned by Earl Cooper, who is chairman of Victoria-Haliburton Deanery Council, was held at St. George's Anglican Church on Sunday evening, September 14. Music was planned and conducted by Bill Gliddon for this service of evening prayer. The Rev. Sharon Towne spoke of her two weeks at the United Nations on the status of women concerns, hearing from formal presentations and informal discussions of challenges and innovations of women who live in less than safe and comfortable conditions. Earl, Kathleen, Louise Copper and I attended the service, with about 70 others.
